Federal Election Commission

MUR # 6530

Dear Mr. Herman:

I believe that the "Indiana Values" SuperPAC, established to support the re-election of Senator Richard Lugar, has violated federal rules with respect to public disclosure and accurate reporting of independent expenditures.

On Friday, January 29 the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette reported that the "Indiana Values" SuperPAC had commissioned a poll of Indiana voters that was conducted from December 13-15, 2011 (attached as exhibit 1). Line 2 of FEC Form 1 (attached as exhibit 2) is supposed to identify the date the PAC formed, and the Form 1 must be filed within 10 days of this date. The Form 1 for "Indiana Values" indicates the formation of the committee on 12/21, which would represent a knowingly false statement as indicated by the expenditures in the Journal-Gazette article.

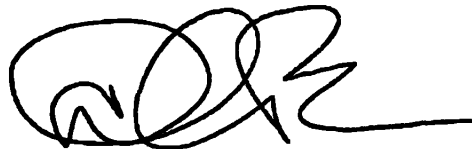

If "Indiana Values" had formed on 12/21/2011, their Form 1 would have been due by 12/31/2011; instead, they filed it five days late. Additionally, if the committee was formed on or before 12/31/2011, they would have had to file a year-end report reporting their contributions and disbursements through 12/31/2011. The fact that they filed their Form 1 late suggests that they did this to avoid filing a year-end report, in order to frustrate public disclosure.

Furthermore, at no time did "Indiana Values" file a 48-hour Independent Expenditure notice disclosing their activity from 12/13-15, and no other entity reports an expenditure that could represent this action. Polling in Indiana requires compliance with anti-automated call laws, and ensures that the cost of a 500 voter poll met the threshold to trigger filing a 48 hour report.

Considering this information, I would like to request that the FEC open an investigation into the funding of the "Indiana Values" SuperPAC at once. The President of the "Indiana Values" SuperPAC is Charles "Chip" Andreae, a former Chief of Staff to Senator Lugar who is presently employed as a lobbyist and has maintained foreign entities as clients including Dubai Ports World, Fanalca SA, and a Beirut-based businessman, raising further questions about why the "Indiana Values" SuperPAC would work to frustrate public disclosure.

Sincerely,

Republican primary-election challenger would have only a 50-50 chance of winning the general election.

Indiana Values SuperPAC said Thursday that a survey taken of 500 registered voters shows Lugar was favored by 58 percent of respondents in a contest against the presumptive Democratic candidate, Rep. Joe Donnelly, D-2nd. Donnelly was favored by 32 percent, and 10 percent of respondents were undecided.

The poll shows a tie - at 42 percent each, with 16 percent undecided - if Donnelly faces state Treasurer Richard Mourdock, who is running against Lugar in the Republican primary.

The statewide poll was conducted Dec. 13 to 15 by Public Opinion Strategies, a Republican polling firm based in Alexandria, Va. The survey has a margin of error of 4.38 percent, according to Indiana Values SuperPAC of Washington, D.C.

"We say, look, if Sen. Lugar is the (Republican) candidate, he wins walking away" against Donnelly, said Andy Klingenstein, treasurer of the political action committee and a Lugar aide in the early 1990s. "If, on the other hand, Mourdock squeaks by in the primary, it's messy. It's going to be a battle. We're not saying he definitely won't win, but it's messy."

Murdock spokesman Christopher Connor and Ben Ray, press secretary for the Indiana Democratic Party, each said the survey was likely a biased "push poll" in which respondents are asked questions designed to elicit certain answers.

The poll "reeks of desperation by his campaign," Connor said about Lugar, a senator since 1977.

Ray said: "In our own (polling) numbers ... Sen. Lugar is stuck in the mid-40s, and he's unable to get out. The thought that he is at 58 (percent) in the general election, without leading voters up before asking that question, is a fallacy to me."

Ray wondered how Indiana Values SuperPAC, which filed a statement of organization Jan. 5 with the Federal Election Commission, could have paid for a poll that was taken in December.

"We incorporated in December," Klingenstein said. "We were in place before the survey."

The statement of organization carries a Dec. 21 date, which is later than the poll.

Super PACs are allowed to raise and spend unlimited sums of money, given anonymously, to elect or defeat candidates. By law, the Lugar and Dan Coats of Indiana, announced Monday they will try to invoke the U.S. Constitution in an effort to get the Keystone XL oil pipeline built Monday.

Mourdock has been endorsed by several conservative tea party organizations. But the Indiana Values SuperPAC poll indicates that the same number of people – 72 percent – who call themselves tea party supporters would vote for either Mourdock or Lugar in the general election.

"I do not believe the tea party people who would be voting for us in the primary would turn around and vote for Dick Lugar in the general election," Conner said.

The poll shows Lugar attracts 57 percent of independent voters in a race with Donnelly, while Mourdock draws 32 percent against the Democrat. And Lugar receives 21 percent of Democratic voters, compared with Mourdock's 5 percent. Donnelly gets 71 percent and 82 percent, respectively.

"To me, the numbers say Sen. Lugar has strong support everywhere," Klingenstein said. "In the general election, he's the overwhelming favorite."

Lugar received a 55 percent favorability rating from voters, compared with Donnelly's 13 percent and Mourdock's 10 percent. But Lugar also had the highest unfavorable response, 21 percent, followed by Mourdock's 19 percent and Donnelly's 10 percent.

Ray questioned why the super PAC did not commission a poll of the two faces in the GOP primary election, then answered his own question: Lugar "is in deep, deep trouble in his primary," Ray said.

Klingenstein said: "We're going out to raise money, and we wanted a vehicle to see how (Lugar and Mourdock) did head-to-head with Donnelly, and it shows Lugar does much better. That was an important finding for us."
